PATENT ICE.

A Patent Ice Company, for the manufacture of ice by artificial means, has just been started at Glasgow, Scotland. In 1851 an Australian gentleman took out a patent for artificial production of ice. His principle consisted in the free distillation of ether in closed vessels surrounded by a non-conducting saline fluid, which latter passed round about metal vessels containing fresh water in the process of freezing. Many other patents have since been taken out in America, France, and the inventor of machines in which ammonia is employed as the working substance. Mr. Kirk, of the firm of John Elder & Co., of Glasgow, has solved the problem of making ice by the mere mechanical compression and expansion of enclosed atmospheric air. With his latest and most improved machine Mr. Kirk can make one ton of ice with about 300 weight of coal. The machines now in operation are each capable of producing five tons of ice in twenty-four hours, and are horizontal in action. They are driven by a steam piston fifteen inches in diameter and work on the principle of the steam engine. The shafts make from fifty-eight to sixty revolutions per minute. The vacuum pump is twenty inches in diameter and twenty-four inches in stroke, and is attached by suitable pipes to an other evaporator on one side and an other condenser on the other. The evaporator is a large cylinder, while the non-conducting saline mixture, in this case brine, circulates within the tubes, and is kept in motion by means of a double-acting pump. The water used is the principal on the roof of buildings, which is collected in a large tank. When ready for working the evaporator is partly filled with ether, and the pump causes a vacuum, the ether boils, and supplies these evaporators. Heat is supplied by the brine. After the ether has been condensed it returns to the evaporator through an other meter. There are eight large tanks, each capable of holding ten tons of water. The shafts of ice are removed by the use of rectangular pans of iron, which are frozen in the ice and afterwards removed by thawing. The ice made by the company is invariably at a temperature of from 15 deg. to 18 deg. below the freezing point of water, and it keeps much longer than the natural ice, which is always at 33 deg. Fahrenheit when in the market. It will thus be seen that the natural order of things has been reversed, and that in this case nature is beaten by mechanical art.—[Ex.]

SENATOR CARPENTER has been laboring very hard to satisfy his constituents and the voters of the country that the back pay appropriation was a fair deal, but he has not yet succeeded. All of the powers of oratory and logic of which he is possessed cannot convince the people that black is white, or that wrong is right. An incident that occurred in Wisconsin, on the Fourth, indicates the drift of popular sentiment. In an eloquent oration in which Hon. James Ross alluded to the merits of the founders of our Government, and commended their unselfish patriotism with the characteristics of the politicians of our own day, he made a slight allusion to the back pay grab. The people cried out almost unanimously, "That is what we want to hear about." Their desires were gratified; and this, though a comparatively slight incident, shows that the voters of the country are in sympathy with the sentiment thus expressed, and will not sustain nor re-elect a senator who will not satisfy the people. A member of Congress or Senator who by his vote contributed to the success of this iniquitous scheme, Carpenter was repudiated in his own State and all of his constituents will receive the same at the hands of their constituents.—[Va. Enterprise.]

CHARLES S. LEON, a merchant of this city, died July 17, 1873, leaving an estate valued at $93,267 83, a large portion of which was bequeathed to the executors of the will, in trust for his children, the deceased having been divorced from his wife, William H. Knapp, and Charles J. Newcomb, the surviving executors of the estate, now commence an equity action in the Twelfth District Court against the widow and mother of the deceased and his children, heirs of the estate. The complaint alleges that all the real estate property held by them for the benefit of the children, is unproductive of any income, and that it is liable to be sold for taxes. They also aver that it is absolutely indispensable for the support and education of the children that the trustees have control of a certain amount of money. As they have no power to sell the real estate without authority of a Court of equity, the Court is asked to order the executors of the estate now in their hands, and that they be authorized to sell at auction a portion of the real estate, the proceeds to be invested for the benefit of the children.—[S. F. Bulletin.]

"The effect of the monopoly in quicksilver has reached Mexico, and a protest against it comes from the capital of that Republic. The Cosmopolitan publishes in the City of Mexico, states that a supply of quicksilver is a matter of life and death to the mining interests of the country. It points out that the only effectual way to meet the rise recently made for Mexico is to throw open the mines and work the known mines in the States of Guerrero and Guanajuato. These deposits it is alleged would not only supply all the wants of Mexico but leave some for exportation. The Mexican Congress before adjourning, made an appropriation for the promotion of the discovery of quicksilver mines, and companies are now in progress of organization to work those already located. If these new quicksilver mines of Mexico only turn out an success and are worked vigorously, they may not only prove a blessing to our sister Republic, but help to break up a monopoly which is working injuriously upon the mining interests of the Pacific Slope.

On the return of State Controller Green, on Saturday from the southern portion of the State, says the Sacramento Union of July 14, State Printer Spengler called on him for his warrant for $29,000 the amount allowed by the Board of Examiners. The Controller declined to draw the warrant for that amount on the ground that there was an overcharge of the account of over $4,000. The question at issue will probably have to be settled by the courts.
